THE FINANCIAL PRESSURE AND THE TRADE PROSPECT.

(From the N. Y. Herald, Nov 3)

There is, undoubtedly, great uneasiness among the manufacturing, commercial, and business community throughout the country in consequence of the financial pressure that has existed for some weeks and that still bears heavily upon industry and trade. There is a feeling of apprehension, too, that the laboring classes, thrown out of employment, or being only partially employed, through the suspension or limitation of work just as the winter is approaching, will be subjected to much suffering. This gloomy state of feeling has been increased within the last few days by the trouble that has come upon some of the largest firms in the country, and notably upon that of the Sprigues. Now, while we would not hold out false hopes as to the prospect, and rather advise every one to put his house in order and be prepared for the worst, we must say there is nothing in the actual or prospective condition of the country to justify alarm or want of confidence.

A financial, commercial or business crisis is frequently and not unaptly spoken of as a storm, and we may apply this simile to the one sweeping over us, which is breaking down the rotten timbers that hung upon our vigorous youth and life. Some live and healthy branches may be damaged by the fall of unsound parts, and the storm may not clear away all that is unsound: but the good and the bad will be more distinctly. The pruning knife can be applied to what remains, and, in the end renewed vigor will be imparted to the growing trade and progress of the country. This is usually the case under similar circumstances among an active, industrious and a practical people. The law of action and reaction operates in the financial and money world as well as in the physical. Of course the duration of a crisis and its effects depends a great deal upon the causes and extent of disturbance, as well as upon the recuperative power of a people. Effete and demoralized communities may suffer long or even sink under the disaster, if it be very great and widespread; but a nation in the glow of youth, full of activity, and possessing boundless resources, soon recovers. Crises occur successively or periodically among all enterprising communities, sometimes from one cause and sometimes from another. They are the result of the extraordinary progress, developments and commercial spirit of the age. Being intent upon acquiring riches people run into overtrading or doubtful speculation. The bubble bursts after a while and spreads consternation. The reaction is comparative paralysis. Then, as recovery follows, another period of like activity sets in, and so the cycle is completed and repeated. England, France, the United States and other commercial nations have the same history, though modified, more or less by national peculiarities and circumstances.

The trouble that weighs upon us now, and that is affecting the manufacturing and other industrial interests of the Republic, is the scarcity of currency. This is the fact as stated by bankers, manufacturers and business men generally. Where even the manufacturers have not so much difficulty in obtaining money to pay their laborers, the orders of their customers have been suspended in part from the stringency of the money market. It does not appear that the country is overstocked with goods, or that the state of our crops and trade at home and abroad is not favorable. Really, the country has seldom been in a better condition as regards the prospect of both internal trade and foreign commerce. The only trouble seems to be about the currency—about the means wherewith to transact business. Yet there has been no actual contraction—that is, the Government has not withdrawn any of the circulating medium. On the contrary, it has rather enlarged it by an extra issue of greenbacks and through increasing the fractional currency by the new silver coinage and issue. The increase of gold through importation within a few weeks to the amount of about ten millions has also augmented our resources for trade. There is, then, more currency than before the crisis and when everything was going on swimmingly. The question is, therefore, will this currency be afloat again as the crisis passes away? The shrinkage of values in stocks and other things, first through the crisis itself and next through the decline of the premium on gold, ought not to contract the currency or withhold it from circulation. We look to the banks chiefly to give free circulation to the currency, as heretofore. Then individuals who have hoarded it will throw it on the market. Let the Wall street and stock speculators fight it out among themselves, and let the trading and manufacturing interests of the country have the relief needed. To repeat what was said before, we do not think we are suffering from over manufactured productions, the demand for our agricultural product abroad is large, and there has rarely been a finer prospect for trade at home and abroad. The means—the currency—is only needed, and of that there is actually something more than before the late disturbance. Let the banks unlock their coffers and the people empty their stockings, and all will be well.

In his sudden awakened military ardor the editor of the Commercial manifests the zeal of a new convert, and again urges the Legislature to appropriate the funds necessary to organize a second regiment of State militia. Our neighbor might emphasize his present conversion of the importance of "stimulating the spirit of patriotism," by giving a few quotations from the back files of the Democrat.

A case similar to that of the Bangor Democrat has just been decided at Concord, N. H. A treasonable newspaper was attacked by a mob very near the time of a similar occurrence in this city, and the result of a third trial to recover damages is thus given in the Portsmouth Journal.

The famous, not to say infamous, case of Palmer vs. the City of Concord,—a suit brought to recover damages for the Democratic Standard newspaper property destroyed by a mob in August, 1861, which had been on a new trial since Monday, Oct. 20th, in a special term of the Supreme Judicial Court, at Concord, before Judge Ladd, was given to the jury on Saturday, 25th, and they returned a verdict for the city. The case has been tried twice before, with no agreement of the jury; and it is a pity that the rebel printers could not at this time have been indicted for treason.

CHEERFUL ITEMS. The Press states that on Saturday afternoon at the close of working hours, the employees of the Portland Machine Works were informed that on and after Nov. 1st, 1873, ten per cent. of the net profits of the business of the company would be divided among them pro rata, in addition to their regular wages.

The Press also says that the Pepperell and Laconia Mills at Biddeford, which have been running five-sixths of the time for the past two weeks resumed full time yesterday morning with wages slightly reduced from the old rates. The other mills and machine shops are running on full time with full wages. In these times of despondency this sign of improvement is cheering.

The Lewiston Journal gives a most cheerful review of the condition of the industries in that city. The mills are running every spindle on full time, improvements and extensions are going forward and there is no feeling of panic. The fall trade of the shoe factories has been somewhat curtailed, but there are only small stocks on hand and it is believed that the active demand will soon revive.

A gentleman of Calais informs the Aroostook Times that the larger portion of the currency in circulation in that city consists of the "Chipman" bills. He think there must be nearly half a million circulating in that city.

The Boston Advertiser says that in Dover on Thursday a one hundred dollar bill actually paid debts amounting to $1000, and within eight hours returned to the man who first paid it out in the morning. It happened that A owed B $100. He paid it. B owed C $100, so he paid the bill over to him. Thus it went, and the ninth gentleman to whom it was paid, happening to owe A $100, paid it over to him; so it paid all these debts and came back to its original owner. This shows how much individuals may do towards relieving the financial stringency, by starting money on its mission of wiping out indebtedness.

EX-GOVERNOR COBURN. 'Toby Candor" writes to the Boston Journal that the health of ex-Governor Abner Coburn is greatly improved, but he will never, probably, be as well as before his sickness. He attends but very little to business matters, and is gradually closing up his affairs. He is reputed to be the richest man in Maine, with several millions of dollars. Most of his wealth has been acquired in lumbering operations. The Spragues of Rhode Island, it is said, pay him $20,000 annually, interest money. The Governor is over seventy years of age, and is a bachelor. It is reported that he has made his will, and in it has remembered Colby University to the amount of one million of dollars, in addition to his previous generous bequests. He is a member of one of the boards of management of that institution.

In the midst of the shutting down of mills and the reduction of laboring forces, we have the curious spectacle of an immense strike by laborers in New York city. The attempt of the builders and master mechanics in that city to reduce the wages of their workmen, has already brought about the beginning of a strike which seems likely to grow to immense proportions. Five thousand struck Monday. The opposition to the movement is quite general, but the masons and bricklayers lead in it. The bosses are said to be equally determined in their efforts.

CLAFLIN & Co. At a meeting of the creditors, of Claflin & Co., in New York Monday afternoon, the statement of their condition showed good assets of $22,508,600 with a total indebtedness of $15,534,000, leaving a surplus of $6,024,000. The meeting agreed to give the firm an extension of four and a half months, maturing in monthly payments, and that no assistance be asked of the banks. This will enable the firm to proceed with its business as usual.

Mr. Alexander Bragden, member of Parliament, in an address at Darlington, Eng., Monday night, stated that he had been offered 10,000 tons of English rails now lying in New York, for a price £2 less than their original cost.

On petition of the Railroad Commissioners Judge Virgin has ordered the Buckfield R.R. Co. to repair their road by December 1st, 1873, and give bond in the penal sum of $20,000 to be approved by the Court, on or before November 10th, or injunction will be issued.

We notice that the newspapers which were deceived into publishing the story that Brown & Ives held a million dollars of Sprague paper and had pressed for payment, have generally contradicted it. There is not a word of truth in the story. Brown & Ives have not, for ten years, held a dollar of Sprague paper.—[Providence Journal.

A Washington despatch says.

It seems almost needless to say that there is no truth in the story that the head of Capt. Jack has been deposited in the Smithsonian Institution, and is on exhibition there. The Interior Department would protest against any government institution receiving the head of any Indian killed, on the ground that it would be an act of barbarity.

The Washington Star says it has been asserted that the house of Jay Cooke & Co., which borrowed from the First National Bank of that city nearly $800,000, has since its failure withdrawn $200,000 in Government currency sixes and railroad bonds, and deposited them with the Secretary of the Treasury as security for $200,000 advanced by the Secretary a few days before their failure. The creditors will inquire into the truth of the report.

THE CANADIAN SCANDAL. An Ottawa despatch says that on Monday Mr. Cunningham, one of the Manitoba members, brought up a question of privilege in the House of Commons. He stated that on Sunday afternoon Alderman Haney of the city of Ottawa came to his room and offered him a very large amount of money as well as official preferment to secure his vote on the side of the Government in the discussion on the Pacific scandal. After discussion the Sergeant-at-Arms was ordered to take Haney into custody. Several members addressed the House, when Sir John Macdonald entered on his defence, making an exhaustive justification of his conduct, and severely reflecting on those who are opposed to him.

Before Stokes left the Tombs he made an affectionate farewell to the occupants of "Murderer's Row," and just after his departure, the following cheerful note from Sing Sing, written by a high-toned young patriciide to congratulate a genteel assassin, was received by the Keeper of the Tombs:

"Dear Charley, Please to inform Ned Stokes that we are going to get up a first-class reception for him in this glorious institution as soon as he puts on the uniform and has his hair cut to the fashion. We shall make him president of our squad and do what we can for him for the short time he is going to stay. I think he was lucky to get off so cheap, don't you? Why, we thought he would get twenty years at least! However, it's all for the best and he's saved his neck. You know if a man is not born to be hanged he will be saved for something else. Yours,

FRANK WALWORTH."

Ex-Gov. Henry A. Wise appalled an interviewer the other day by admitting that it would take a book, and a pretty big one at that, to contain his opinions about the present condition of the country. Speaking generally, however, he said he would not touch either of the existing political parties with a pair of tongs, they are so corrupt; that A. H. Stuart's proposition to colonize the negroes is barbarous, impracticable, and absurd; that the negroes are the most steady, industrious, and capable laborers the South could get; that he would like to have the Government build the James River and Kanawha Canal; and that if Grant would only bring about speedy payments at once he would drop on his knees to him. He thought the vote in Virginia on Tuesday would be close and the result doubtful, but he appeared utterly indifferent as to which party prevailed.

The N. Y. Commercial Advertiser says of the jury in the Stokes case that they virtually give warrant to day, to the man of position, wealth, and dashing exterior, and leave severity of punishment to the poor and the unknown. In this verdict the lawyers who defended the criminal have won a great triumph, and one for which they have labored with consummate zeal, tact, and ability. But they are lawyers, and they have struck a just chord squarely between her bandaged eyes. Their triumph is the defeat of justice. It cannot be doubted that there was prepared testimony for this verdict, and few will believe that the jury, in the necessary haste to hear upon the jury, in the necessary haste to hear upon the jury, do not hesitate to say, suppressed

THE DEPRESSION OF BUSINESS

NEW YORK, Nov 4—A dispatch from Philadelphia says that although no failures are announced, the want of confidence makes anything like business beyond the smallest limit almost an impossibility Many of the largest houses are dismissing their employes and others are giving holidays to their salesmen. No improvement is looked for before the turn of the year

THE MILLS

At Germantown, Kensington and Manyunk, nearly all the Frankfort mills are closed and the few that are still running are running half time At Philadelphia mills are flushing up orders and running full time At Lancaster it is announced by mill owners to continue work only a short time and thus give relief to all the latest hands and keep them together Both of the iron works in Morristown are stopped and 600 men are out The cotton mills there are also closed

THE IRON WORKS

At Phoenixville are still going on all time and employ 1300 men and 700 or 800 in the mines. The slight reduction of wages has been cheerfully submitted to by the men and work will be furnished all winter. The men at work at the Pencoyd Iron Works are on half time, with a reduction of 15 per cent. in wages

IN LEHIGH VALLEY

Ten of thirty furnaces in Lehigh Valley have been blown out All the car shops rolling mills and car wheel foundries in the valley have either stopped or are running on half time. Only 500 men are at work in the Philadelphia Navy Yard and half this number will probably be dismissed this week. The Diamond State Iron Co has stopped the rolling mills at Wilmington Del for want of orders.

A CONSTRUCTION COMPANY WITH $7 000 000 LIABILITIES GONE TO PROTEST.

Three hundred thousand dollars of paper of the California and Texas Construction Co which is building the Texas Pacific Railroad went to protest to day The liabilities of the Construction Co are reported at $8,500,000 in notes variously endorsed, all maturing within ninety days, $1 000 000 of loans on collaterals and individual security $500 000 of unsecured obligations in the shape of drafts and $2,000,000 of floating debt amounting in all to nearly $7 000 000 This amount with other $4 000 000 cash paid in on stock by the Construction Co has been expended under careful management in the construction of the Texas Pacific Railroad and there are 300 miles of road completed, equipped and in operation and about 150 miles additional graded, bridged and ready for the iron. The resources of the Construction Co consist of $30,000 per mile of completed road, of first mortgage bonds of railroad company, secured by a lien on the road and 1,000 acres of land per mile granted by the State of Texas, over $2 000 000 of unpaid construction checks most of which will be promptly paid, and the private property of individual endorsers which is very large It is believed that the creditors, most of whom hold large amounts, will speedily arrange for an extension of liabilities to give the Company time to realize money without the ruinous sacrifice required by the present stringency

MASSACHUSETTS.

THE ELECTION

WORCESTER, Nov 3 In this city there is great apathy among the Republicans, great activity among the Democrats and much scratching The indications favor a Democratic majority

A FIGHT VOTE—THE USUAL REPUBLICAN VICTORY

BOSTON Nov 4—(5 P M) We have scattering returns from all parts of the State showing a rather light vote, compared with 1871 and '72 and indicating the election of Governor Washburn by 10 000 to 12 000 plurality

ANTI-PROHIBITION

was an element of strength to the Democrats and the reconstructionists. Mr Gaston received a heavy vote in several of the larger cities and towns, from the opponents of prohibition

INDEPENDENT SENATORS

The contest for State Senator in the Fifth (Suffolk) District, between J L Stevenson, the regular nominee of both Democrats and Republicans, resulted in the election of J A Lane on the Republican Citizens ticket by over 1000 majority For the Second (Middlesex) District Gen N P Banks was also elected Senator over the regular Republican candidate by over 1 000 plurality

A CLEAN SWEEP

The Republican ticket for State officers is elected and Republican Councillor ticket, together with a Republican majority in both branches of the Legislature.

Charles Hale is elected to the Legislature from Boston by a large majority

THE VOTE OF BOSTON

complete was Washburn 7 726, Gaston, 6 715 scattering 93, total vote 16,909, which is little more than half that of last year

THE LEGISLATURE

The Journal office at midnight has returns from 311 towns, giving Washburn 60 426, Gaston 57 530, scattering 426

Of the forty Senators twenty-six Republicans are elected. The House will probably be three-fourths Republicans In the Senate 2 to 1 are opposed to the prohibitory liquor law

The murderer was subsequently shot and mortally wounded by a Creek Indian guard.

A FABRICATION.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 4. Atty.-Gen Williams to day received a telegram from Governor Kellogg of La, saying that the military who are in Grant Parish acting as a posse in aid of the civil authorities to arrest the perpetrators of the Colfax massacre did not arrive until after the Grant Parish outrage alleged to have taken place, and the telegram also says that advices just received indicate that the account of the outrage is a fabrication.

NEW HAMPSHIRE.

CONCORD SAVINGS BANKS.

CONCORD, Nov. 4. Some uneasiness having existed in regard to Savings Banks in this city on Monday, the trustees of Trade at their meeting last night passed resolutions expressing full confidence in the banks and recommending them in case of a run to refuse payment altogether rather than attempt to raise money at a ruinous sacrifice. The Savings Banks to day determined to pay no depositors to January 1st.

There were many eager volunteers and every musket in the armory of the Grays was soon in the hands of citizens, anxious to preserve order. AUTUMN VOICES.

BY MARY D. BODD.

Seemeth the hours that speeds the oar
A dirge from the dying hours,
That wakens note for the passing year.
Spring's veil as of birds and flowers:
Or is it a psalm of love rising on
From the grateful earth of ours?

Ended their burden of year song,
Their swell upon chirping sc
Soft her and sweet the whole day long
Of joy or woe.
Each and broadcloths from each blade of grass
In undertone deep and low?

I only I like for a jarring tone,
All to be set to me—
From the cricket that answers, beneath the stone,
The brown toad hid in the tree,
Of the unlest insect of them all
That helps with the harmony.

Never a poet in the serenade!
Like laughter of ripened corn,
Hitherto through sunshine and shade,
And from twilight to morn
Is a rapturous I like in the dreamful night,
That of satisfied life seems born.

With the old of the summer about us floats,
Soft melody with the haze
Of Indian summer with chorol notes
Trolled these tuneful autumn days,
Spake the heart of the heartless cricket dear!
In the song of sorrow or praise.

If this I am sure, that you bring to me
Things to the extent of my I know,
Of this I am sure, that you sing to me,
In numerous tenderly low,
Of a sadness that life was brought,
And for rest that it has known.

—Leon Lippincott.

EDITH—A STORY OF NEW ENGLAND LIFE.

(Concluded.)

"And I would give my eyesight, I would give my right hand, my new diamond studs and all my real and personal estate, to know that the only woman I ever loved was not a widow! There's a nice young man for you! I wonder if he is intended as a typical Yankee."

"Did you ever read "Cake?" said I, "it is one of the best of the crop of anti-slavery novels which sprang from the seed sown by Mrs. Stowe. Two children, a brother and a sister, are brought up and educated at the schools in a northern State. That a mystery surrounds their origin is well known, but its true solution is not guessed at, even by themselves, and no objection is made when the young man soon and marries the daughter of a respectable family. The marriage is a happy one, the husband forms a profitable business connection, and all goes well until the secret is suddenly divulged. Have you seen in some patronimic display a garden of roses change rapidly to a barren field, dimly descend through falling snow? So quickly changed the hero's fair prospects. His wife did not calmly disowned him, his partner deserted him. His sister's fate was more happy. Finally acknowledged by her white father, she accompanied him to Europe, where she was followed by her lover, not a Yankee, who finally married her."

All that is gross exaggeration. What! shall a young, possessed apparently of all the charms of mind and person which invariably [illegible] individual of character and desert be scorned by the nearest and dearest because [illegible] so-called that ever so slight a portion of African blood mingles with a stream that [illegible] in his veins? And should such desertion be sanctioned by an enlightened community? Let's put the question to ballot! Here is an unpleasant form. Miss Winthrop [illegible] shall be your privilege to vote first. Would you, under any circumstances, be willing to [illegible] nigger?"

How absurd!" said Edith, her bright face contracting with a momentary expression of disgust.

Miss Lobby," began Sandys, his voice tremulous with emotion, his eyes full of pearly childlike entreaty. What he would have said heaven knows, but had evidently forgotten that he had any auditors besides the girl he addressed, but just at that moment there was a shrill scream and a great commotion on the bevy of children. We all hastened to the scene; there was no serious accident, only a child had fallen from a swing, but on its fall, their broken up, did not remain.

As our young people paired off for the return I noticed that Sandys walked with Edith and I saw words passed them as they stood by Miss Winthrop's gate. He was talking rapidly and earnestly. She was motionless as a statue but I caught that in the moonlight I could see the traces of tears on her face.

Next day it was said that Sandys had left for home very suddenly. He had started on foot early in the morning, and all his belongings were sent after him in the mail coach to the next town. His abrupt departure made a [illegible] in Sandys' circle, of course, and many were the surmises and explanations. The [illegible] the greatest degree of credulity was [illegible]. He had been a slave, the son of a [illegible] who would not acknowledge him as his own heir. He had confessed to Edith [illegible] the secret of his parentage as well [illegible] as his despair at her answer he had [illegible] to leave a place which could no [illegible] to him, and act on for him. Edith neither confirmed nor denied this account. She was plainly unconscious of smiling simpered, when the subject was broached in her presence. Indeed, her apparent insensibility [illegible] to extreme to be regarded as although I sincere by those who had remarked the interest, never disguised, with which she had regarded the absent young man.

Days never returned the stirring events in the following months occupied our attention and made us the excuse on of all local topics and he was forgotten. In the fall we organized war-aware associations and took part in torchlight processions. All winter long the gloomy anticipation of war, smouldered over events, to be startled into flame by the shock that rent all the whole country. Our young men were massed first one and then another from their accustomed places. Our girls made lint-locks and knit stockings and wrote innumerable letters.

As you know, I obtained a position as surgeon of volunteers. Edith and Laura, despite much opposition on the part of their friends, such, did, as they generally did in following their own sense will, and it happened that in June, 1861, they were acting as nurses under my directions, at the Naval Hospital at Annapolis. I confess that I at first doubted whether these young girls had the courage and capacity to fulfill the trying duties demanded of them, but my doubt gave place to admiring wonder as I noted the unshrinking firmness, the grave, [illegible] ping gentleness, they, brought to the performance of their work.

Our patients were mostly exchanged prisoners in every stage of debility and loathsome disease. It is idle for me to speak of the sickening horrors we witnessed, the incredible of suffering we strove too often vainly to relieve.

One day I was summoned to a new case, a hop less one, as I was at the first glance.—As we afterwards learned, the prisoner as an officer of a negro regiment, had been treated with more than usual severity, and his release had only been determined when it was found that he was in a dying condition.

I hated as I was to such sights, yet on my being the ghastly figure I involuntarily shuddered. To such weakness was betrayed by the brave girl who had reached the scene before me. Tenderly as his mother might, she lifted the matted hair and bathed the sunken temples, and strove with anxious attention to gain some sign that the poor patient realized that in his last moments he was cared for by friendly hands.

Suddenly the drawn muscles of his face relaxed, the mouth fell into natural curves, the glazed eyes brightened, and in that momentary transfiguration we recognized Robert Sandys. Half lifting his head, he gazed into the face of his nurse. "Edith!" he said, and almost in the utterance he fell back on his pillow, dead.

The next day we buried him. We three who had once known him living, snatched from our pressing cares a brief time to follow his remains to the grave. Edith wept silently as the burial service was read. Such tears were but a natural tribute to render to the memory of the man who had loved her.—"And whom she had loved or I cannot say that. Frank and gracious as she is ordinarily, she is also curiously reticent on subjects which concern her nearly, and not the dearest of friends might venture to put such a question to her.

Well our war experiences are so far behind us in the past that sometimes they seem to us almost like distressing dreams which we do not willingly recall, although they will haunt us unbidden. Our village in externals is not greatly changed. Good Dr. Abbott is dead; his place is filled by a Congregationalist minister of the modern type—founder of his horse than of his book, and much better at a lyceum lecture than a doctrinal sermon. Laura is his helpful and popular wife. From the young doctor I have become the middle-aged one, and my company is no longer sought by the youths and maidens; but I am invited to elderly tea-drinkings, and expected to entertain spinsters and widows whose ages are supposed to coincide with my own.

Edith, she herself says, is an old maid; but she does not in the least fulfil the conventional idea of one. She is entirely her own mistress, and her means, being ample considerable, she might take any position she chose in our small world; or justify reasonable aspirations in a wider sphere. But she has adopted what the gossips call a singular and unaccountable course. At her grandfather's old house she maintains quite a colony of children of all complexions, from the purest Caucasian in appearance to the most thick-lipped and woolly-headed of little Africans.—But the little waifs have all some portion of negro blood, and some of them were born in slavery. No fine lady's pets are they, but immortal beings in training to lead useful and honorable lives.

"What would you have me do?" said Edith, in reply to some remonstrances. "All who have more money than they know what to do with, owe some debt to the poor and helpless. Let me pay mine in my own way."

To me she said: "My friend, I must have some definite object in life, or life isn't worth having. I have no genius, as you know; if I were rich or author by eccentricity, as people call it, might find its outlet in other directions. As it is, my work suits me, and I think I may hope I am doing some good in my day and generation."

And as she laughed and held out her hand to me with the old gay cordiality, I was silenced if not convinced.

"But you thought, all the same that it was a pity Miss Edith refused to become a happy and honored wife instead of clinging to her lonely estate and her strange scheme for a life-time's occupation and pleasure?"

"I never said that!" rejoined the doctor with some asperity; "but see! my watch tells me that the dinner hour is approaching, and my stomach accuses the admonition. Shall we go home?"—[Commonwealth.
